Official Letter of appointment to represent the World Society of Anti-aging
Medicine

Brussels, the 28-11-2008

Dear Dr Anoop Chaturvedi,

I am honored to appoint you as the representative for South East Asia of the World Society of Anti-Aging Medicine and of its educational programs such as the board certifications in anti-aging medicine and nutritional medicine. Also as head of the anti-aging medicine specialization, I appoint you as the representative for India.

It will truly be a privilege to have you help us organize these events.

The World Society of Anti-Aging medicine represents over the 6000 active members and is currently the largest international society in the field. The Board certifications are based on the successful passing of examinations based on the theoretical and practical information of heavily referenced textbooks and a number of conditions to be fulfilled such as good medical practice.

The AAMS is a two-year post-graduate educational program for physicians focused on prevention of senescent processes. The AAMS started in 2003. Its courses focuses on evidence based medicine, as the directory board constantly strives to provide participants with the best academic and scientific medical information possible. English is its usual language. The AAMS has attracted now over the 1000 physicians when all its seminars are counted together. Physicians come from all over the world: participants from over the 80 different nationalities have showed up in its seminars.

With consideration,
Dr Thierry Hertoghe,
President of the World Society of Anti-aging Medicine
